A photograph of two men standing back-to-back on the deck of a boat. They are both wearing white long-sleeved shirts and olive green trousers. They are looking out towards a harbor filled with many white yachts. In the background, a town is built on a hillside overlooking the water. The scene is captured in a cinematic style with soft lighting.

Discover all about the suite: a unique point of view over the Mediterranean Sea

In order to find the perfect balance between tradition and modernity, elegance and comfort, Jacques Garcia has chosen to dress the walls of this suite with a big name from the textile print edition: Pierre Frey. These new ivory wall coverings in shades of pink, light blues, lilac greens and purples, blend perfectly with the honey-colored parquet, Louis XVI furniture and the natural light emanating from its large picture windows.

The spacious bedroom opens onto a dressing room with dressing table and a bathroom with massage shower and large bathtub. The large living room has a veritable library of over 100 books and extends onto a majestic terrace with lush greenery, imagined by the landscape designer Jacques Messin, made up of a wide variety of plants and trees.
