Dragonfly

Reunite with Your Inner Child

Mashpi Reserve, a 6,177-acre (2,500-hectare) conservation property located within the Metropolitan District of Quito, forms a part of the Ecuadorian Chocó rainforest, known as one of the world's greatest biodiversity hotspots. Extending south from Panama to the Pacific Coast of Ecuador and beyond, the pristine forest ecosystems of the Chocó are full of secrets that researchers are only now beginning to uncover.

Orchid Sobralia

The Colors and Inhabitants of the Forest

Amidst tumbling waterfalls and lush tropical greenery, wildlife comes in an extraordinary variety of bright colors. Birds sport shiny hues of steel blue, turquoise, ruby reds, or emerald greens, rivaling the colors worn by myriad butterflies and bright, and even translucent, jungle frogs. Over one fourth of the bird species of Ecuador, famed for its broad diversity of birdlife, can be found in Mashpi Reserve.

The exuberant plant life is even richer. Orchid species alone number into the many hundreds and bromeliads and ferns abound. Round the curve on any of our well-designed walking paths and discover monkeys, peccaries, and pumas.

Mashpi Lodge expeditions

Watch as the Chocó's secrets reveal themselves to you along ground-level treks and rides through the tree tops aboard Mashpi's unique "Sky Bike." Marvel at the landscape after ascending through the canopy via the observation tower. Brace yourself for the waterfalls that line our nature trails. Enjoy the hummingbirds and butterflies as they flit around you. Satisfy your scientific curiosity with our resident biologists.

Exploring Mashpi's Rainforest

Contrast, Comfort

Mashpi is like no other jungle lodge. Contrast the dazzling colors of the wild with the clean lines and smooth curves of the award-winning, 24-room designer hotel. See how the architecture reinforces the difference between the forest and the hermetic glass cocoon of the lodge. Unwind with gourmet cuisine. Close the door, lie back on perfectly crisp bed linens, and relax and recharge for your next exciting excursion.

Yaku Suite

Spa and Wellness

Located in the dazzling beauty of the Mashpi Reserve, Samay Wellness Center is the ideal place for nourishing mind, body and soul. In the spa, located right next to the terrace, two rooms are ready to transport our guests to a state of complete and utter relaxation. Here, a wide array of select beauty treatments and massages can be enjoyed as well as an outdoor hot tub and yoga deck. This is definitely the ideal way to enrich your adventures and develop a profound connection with nature.
